

Student Right-To-Know Act

Student Right-To-Know and Campus Security Acts are federal law that requires institutions of higher education receiving federal financial assistance to make available several key pieces of information:

- To current and prospective students, the college's graduation and/or completion rates for its full-time, degree seeking students.
- To current students and employees, crime statistics and security policy information about the College.